LAHASKA GIRL IS CROWNED CHAMPION HARMONICA PLAYER

Miss Mildred Cadwallader Is Picked from Group of 40 Contestants

BOYS ARE RUNNERS-UP

Frank Sodano, South Langhorne, Receives Cash Award

NEW HOPE, May 29—Before an audience that completely filled the large auditorium at Deer Park, Saturday afternoon, Miss Mildred Cadwallader, of Lahaska, was selected from a group of 40 contestants as the harmonica champion of Bucks County for 1934. After a warmly contested competition the runners-up were pronounced as Walter Fox and Gerald Carr, of Doylestown, while Miss Ellen Ashbridge, of Holicong, easily won fourth mention. Frank Sodano, South Langhorne, came in for a share of the honors with his engaging personality and good sportsmanship and much to his surprise received a cash award which was not in the picture of Mr. Hoxie's announcement of prizes.

The contestants showed a fine attitude for playing the harmonica and their selections comprised mainly the classics which most folks did not expect to hear them render.

A most hearty and enthusiastic welcome was accorded each band as it marched to the stage with military precision. A number of groups were in uniform and presented an unusually fine appearance, especially the Buckingham Harmonica Band under the direction of J. Samuel Carr, of Doylestown, which boasted a drill captain as well as a director of music. Their rendition of Asa's Death from "Peer Gynt" by Grieg in four-part harmony with piano accompaniment by Miss Carr showed evidence of careful preparation and observance of all musical requirements. The Judges awarded this band first place.

The second best rating was accorded the Rushland Band under the direction of William Hay of Southampton who conducted the majority of the classes which appeared in the afternoon's contest. Rushland presented an unusually fine appearance and a musical selection of real merit, Beautiful Blue Danube Waltz. Two youthful soloists from this band added much to the pleasure of the afternoon's presentation.

So close was the work of the other bands which appeared in the contest that it was some time before the judges could render a decision which was finally handed down to Penns Park. Their display of enthusiasm showed that they at least were very well pleased with the decision.

The distinguished conductor of the Doylestown Symphony Orchestra, Louis Pearlman, made the presentation of the cups given by the Rotary, Kiwanis, and Optimist Club of Doylestown, to the winning bands which he complimented highly for their interest in music and future possibilities. Individual prizes of beautiful solo harmonicas were presented to the champion and her runners-up by Ettore Manieri, 1933 harmonica champion of Philadelphia, together with gold, silver and bronze medals.

Mr. Hoxie in greeting the large assembly of children in his usual friendly way made everyone feel at ease and welcome and the usual tenseness that prevails in contests was dispelled by his congenial way of handling the situation. He extended an earnest invitation for all harmonica players to return to the Park as his guests the evening of Saturday, June 30th, at which time Lit Brothers' Chorus of eighty-five voices under the direction of Henry Motz will present a delightful program assisted by the famous Philadelphia Harmonica Band under the personal direction of Mr. Hoxie. This is the first of a series of Saturday evening concerts that are to be given in the Park throughout the summer. There will be no admission charge for this gala opening performance.

Mr. Hoxie outlined his hopes for an even greater harmonica contest next year and the affair of Saturday will no doubt be augmented by many hundreds of players in another season.

ASK "BOB," HE KNOWS

(By "The Stroller")

A certain man about town is becoming the loss of $300, it is said. Yesterday he invited some of his friends to take a walk and while en route he ordered treats at the various places were visited. In each he tendered $100 bill in payment. Change could not be given and the drinks were charged.

Finally when the last place was visited the $100 bill was missing. Upon his arrival home he says that he found $200 more had been taken from his room.

Those who were with him plead innocent.

But "Bob" is out the money.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE ASSISTS THE FARMERS AS WELL AS ENFORCES THE PURE FOOD LAWS OF THE COMMONWEALTH

Food Laws Are Designed To Protect Health of State's Residents

EXAMINE MANY FOODS

Encourages the Development and Success of Agriculture Throughout State

(Note: This is the tenth of a series of "Know Your State Government" articles written for the Courier by International News Service.)

By G. Everett Doying (I. N. S. Staff Correspondent) (Copyright, 1934, by I. N. S.)

HARRISBURG, May 29—(INS)—In addition to lending an assisting hand to the farmer, the Department of Agriculture is charged with enforcement of the State's pure food laws.

Far-reaching in effect, the food laws are designed to protect the health of Pennsylvanians and prevent the sale of adulterated, misbranded and unwholesome foods and beverages. More than 9,000 specimens of various foods are examined annually by the Department's Bureau of Foods and Chemistry which operates with this slogan:

"If it is a food, we have analyzed it."

The Bureau also licenses about 10,000 oleomargarine dealers, bottling plants, ice cream plants, bakeries, cold storage warehouses and egg opening establishments. All commercial fertilizers, feeding stuffs and lime products, insecticides and fungicides must be registered with the Bureau.

But the work of the Department is not solely in the protection of health. Numerous laws charge the Department with encouraging the development and success of agriculture.

This is done principally through three bureaus: animal industry, markets and plant industry.

The bureau of animal industry protects the health of the $110,000,000 livestock and poultry industry in the state by prevention control and eradication of transmissible diseases, such as bovine tuberculosis, hog cholera, fowl pox and the like. Field representatives make more than 1,500,000 tests annually in this work. Rigid quarantines can be established to protect certain herds or flocks. Indemnities of $1,500,000 biennially are paid to farmers whose stock is killed by the Department in its disease eradication work.

Slaughter houses and meat markets are regulated through this bureau and meats are inspected. Certain sanitary standards must be met. This bureau also enforces the dog law, licensing 500,000 dogs and destroying another 24,000 stray dogs a year. Livestock dealers are licensed by the bureau.

Through the Bureau of Markets, the Department assists farmers in promoting their products.

TWO PLAINTIFFS ARE SUING FOR $5500 TOTAL

Result of Automobile Crash Near Mechanicsville Is Cause

TWO WANT DIVORCES

DOYLESTOWN, May 29—Wharton E. Sharp, of Warrington, was named the defendant in a damage suit, containing the names of two plaintiffs, claiming the sum of $5500, according to an action in trespass filed in Court here.

In a statement of claim, Alberta B. Moore, who claims damages for personal injuries to herself; John A. Moore, who claims damages as the husband of Alberta B. Moore, and John A. Moore, who claims damages for property owned by him, allege that on November 11, 1933, on the Buckingham-Pipersville highway, near Mechanicsville, their car was struck by a car driven by the defendant. Failure to stop at a "stop sign" and careless and negligent operation of the defendant's car were given as causes of the accident.

Mr. Moore, it is alleged, paid the sum of $130.18 to have his car repaired.

In her own right, Mrs. Moore seeks to recover $5000. For medical expenses and treatment with reference to his wife, John A. Moore claims $200. For his car he hopes to recover the sum of $300.

Two libels in divorce, in both cases the libellants were women, were filed. Marion McVaine, of 331 Buckley street, Bristol, has started a divorce proceeding against her husband, Maurice McVaine, charging him with cruel and barbarous treatment. According to the libel, they were united in marriage March 19, 1928, in Bristol. The respondent gave his address as 310 Lafayette street, Bristol.

Charged with cruel and barbarous treatment, G. Russell Sacks was named the respondent in divorce action by his wife, Elizabeth Sacks. Mr. and Mrs. Sacks were married June 12, 1929, at Valley Forge. The libellant is a resident of Langhorne.

FRENCH FLIERS TO BE RECEIVED BY NEW YORK

Keenly Disappointed Over Failure To Reach Their Goal

WON NEW LAURELS

NEW YORK CITY, May 29—Captain Maurice Rossi and Lieut. Paul Codot, gallant French airmen who preferred being living men to dead heroes, were to be given an official reception by New York City today. The aviators, who landed at Floyd Bennett field yesterday, far short of their goal on their projected non-stop all-time distance hop from Paris to the Pacific coast, were keenly disappointed, but the reception was expected to refresh their spirit.

In spite of their failure to achieve their goal and thus annex a $66,000 prize offered by the Federal government, the two aces won new and sensational laurels. Battling terrific headwinds all the way, Rossi and Codot covered the 3700 miles in exactly 38 hours and 28 minutes. They are the first men to fly the Atlantic in heavier-than-aircraft in both directions, and second to make the westward flight from Paris to New York.

ROPER MAKES GOOD COMEBACK; WINS GAME

Hurls for Damp Wash and Defeats Hibernians, 4 to 2

EDGELY WINS GAME

By T. M. Juno

Fans of the Bristol Twilight League were treated to two brilliant exhibitions of fast baseball last night as the Damp Wash A. A. beat the Hibernians, 4-2, on Leedom's field, and the Edgely Braves blanked the St. Ann's team, 2-0, at Edgely.

The Damp Wash-Hibernians game saw the comeback of Ted Roper into the Twilight League. Roper was very effective, giving the Hibs but three bingles and keeping them well-scattered. The two tallies off his delivery were the direct result of two errors by third-baseman Lane.

With Roper doing the mound chores, another old-timer, "Crude" Hagerman was helping his mates defensively. Twice doing the fracs, Hagerman raced to deep centerfield to make catches of fly balls which appeared labeled for at least doubles.

At Edgely, Gene Lawler was having a masterful night. He set down the St. Ann's team with but one bingle and that was a bunt which Lawler may have converted into an out had he fielded it properly. For four innings, Lawler retired the Purple and Gold runless and hitless and appeared well on the way to the mythical hall of fame.

Incidentally, the fifth inning was the only frame in which Lawler was in danger. In this inning, Bornice laid down a bunt which Leinheiser threw wild in fielding. Manzo was passed. Lawler breezed the third strike past Angelo. DiBlassio sacrificed and the pill rolled past Lawler for a single, filling the sacks. When Fields sent a fly over short, the Edgely cheers changed to groan for the swat looked like a clean hit. But Hibbs came tearing in at the ball and caught it knee high and with a quick throw to second doubled Manzo.

BRISTOL MEN SENTENCED TO TERMS IN PRISON

John Carr, in Court for Tenth Time; Officer Injured In Fracas

MANY CASES CONTINUED

DOYLESTOWN, May 29—It was announced in Criminal Court by District Attorney Eastburn that the two most important cases scheduled for trial at the present term of Criminal Court have been continued for the term because of the illness of defense counsel, Harry E. Grim of Perkasie. These cases were both the most important for the present term and were to have occupied the greater part of the time, which will probably mean the present term of Criminal Court will be ended within a day or two instead of two weeks.

The first case continued for the term was that of Linford Foulke, Quakertown, former Mennonite minister, who is charged with attempting to set fire to a barn, attempting to burn a barn, and false pretense. The other case is that of Mrs. Anna Herbein, of Perkasie, beauty parlor operator, charged with abortion followed by death.

The case of Meyer Carp, Montgomeryville, who also is charged with abortion followed by death, and who pleaded guilty last week so that he could go before the Grand Jury and testify against Anna Herbein, will not be sentenced until the next term of Court until Anna Herbein's case is disposed of.

Harry Louderbough, of Bristol, pleaded guilty to a charge of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating liquor. This was his second offense. He was sentenced by President Judge Hiram H. Keller to pay a fine of $200 and costs and to serve 30 days in the Bucks County Prison. The only witnesses against him were an officer and Dr. J. Fred Wagner, who testified he was drunk.

John Carr of Bristol was in Court yesterday for the tenth time. His first appearance in Court was in 1911 and ever since he has had a long list of different charges against him. Carr is alleged to have threatened to kill an officer during a brawl in his home on February 17th, and charged with aggravated assault and battery and assault and battery on two bills. Officer Phillips of Bristol suffered a cut on the arm as a result of the altercation which required him to go to the hospital for 39 visits. Chief of Police Jones of Bristol testified the defendant was intoxicated and that Officer Phillips was bleeding badly. Both officers said it is just a case of going down there three or four times a week to straighten the place out. When Carr took the stand he claimed that most of the Bristol officers were drunk when they came down there. Carr is also charged with resisting an officer. He was sentenced to serve eight months to one year in the Bucks County prison on the charge of assault and battery.

Harry Till and his wife, Tillie Till, of Warrington Township, pleaded guilty yesterday to a charge of possession of unlawfully acquired liquor. This was the first prosecution in Bucks County under the new act brought under the Pinchot Liquor Control Bill. The place was raided in Warrington Township by two officers of the Pennsylvania State Liquor Control Board and by State Trooper Lawrence Briar of the Doylestown sub-station state police about a month ago. They seized ten gallons of moonshine whiskey, a 100-gallon still and two barrels of mash. The defendants pleaded guilty and Judge Keller suspended sentence so far as the fine was concerned and placed them on probation for a period of two years all on condition that they pay the costs. County Detective Anthony Russo was named as the probation officer.

In testifying in the case, Tillie Till said she bought the moonshine from a fellow because a doctor had told her it would be very beneficial to her health. She said she also bought ten gallons because she was getting ready to throw a party for a friend of hers. Harry Till told the Court the mash found in the barn was for the cows; he said the cows had worms and that a Bucks County veterinary had said he should use the mash for the wormy cows. Tillie Till described the still in the cellar as "just an old kettle that was hanging around."

Regular use of the Courier classified column is economical and profitable.

OUR HEROIC DEAD

There is little the living can do to express the reverence every right thinking American feels for the heroic legions that sleep the eternal sleep in hallowed spots in every community, large and small, throughout the nation. A few blossoms on their resting place, words of comfort for those whose heroes have left behind—that is all. The gratitude for their unselfish devotion to their country and their homes is deep within—expressionless.

By little acts of reverence performed, we do not give our sanction or approval to war and its horrors. It is wholly apart from that and centered upon the men themselves, men who answered the call to arms without question, firm in the belief it was for loved ones and country. War, except in defense, is wrong and always will be, but until the scourge is wiped out, brave men will offer up their lives as a sacrifice. Only through their sacrifice will mankind realize, eventually, its gigantic blunder.

The praise, then, is to these courageous spirits, not to war. They hated the conflicts, too, but were powerless to halt them, except by shedding their blood. The glory is theirs—won in agony. Let us honor them as heroes, bending every effort of the mind and heart toward ending the conditions that made it necessary for them to go to war.

ENDING A WAR

After many months of investigation and study, including a survey made by a special commission on the ground, the League of Nations virtually has admitted its helplessness in trying to end the Chaco war between Bolivia and Paraguay.

Instead of relying upon its own powers, it has sent out an appeal to all nations, inside and outside of the league, to stop the sale of munitions to the combatants.

There seems to be little doubt that such action would end the war. And there appears to be a promising prospect that the league's proposal will be followed by arms-exporting nations.

Neither Bolivia nor Paraguay manufactures war munitions. Both are dependent upon importations. That they have had no trouble in obtaining adequate supplies is indicated by the fact that the present war has been in progress two years. The struggle has been bitter and shows no signs of being ended soon by a victory of either side. How many thousands have been killed and how many wounded is unknown. Attempts to end the struggle by mediation and other means have failed. If a stop to it can be put now by the refusal of other nations to sell munitions to either side, such action will be serving the cause of humanity.

Would such an ending, though, result in bringing about any long period of peace? Would not both nations themselves turn to the manufacture of war materials and resume the struggle just as soon as they felt they had accumulated a sufficient supply?

The controversy over the Chaco region is one of long standing. Deep hatreds exist on either side. Not until these are removed will permanent peace between the two nations be possible.

To be in style the government must reduce the waste-line.

GIFTS for GRADUATION

GRADUATION! You have a son or daughter who is going to pass an important milestone in this business of getting on in the world. You are a bit puffed up with pride. You feel a glow of satisfaction that is going to express itself in a gift. What shall it be?

Tradition has nominated certain things for graduation gifts — a watch for the son — a ring for the daughter. Fine! But the younger generation has outmoded a number of venerable traditions. Maybe, in the case of your boy or girl, something less usual would be more welcome. How to find out?

One modern parent we know used this gift-giving plan at Christmas. He casually introduced a discussion of advertisements with his son and daughter. They looked through the newspapers together. The conversation was directed toward advertising. It developed into a discussion of products.

This parent discovered his young folks knew a lot more about merchandise than he dreamed. They knew modes, styles, fashions, trends, trade names, the value of advertised responsibility. They had preferences and judgments formed on facts. He said it was the most successful Christmas their family ever had.

Try this little scheme on your graduates this year. It will make your gift-giving more successful all around.

ous. "Surely you are not proposing that we fight in the presence of ladies, are you, Jeff? Go on now like a good fellow and sober up; we'll talk it over later."
"No, you don't, you yeller pup. You ain't a-goin' to hide behind no wimmen—not from Jeff Todd!"
With a shrill cry Nance Jordan caught the backwoodsman's arm. "You ain't a-goin' to hit him, Jeff Todd. You darsent. Ann Haskel'll kill you if you tech him. Please go 'way, Herb. Please take him somewhere 'way from here, Miss Diane, 'fore he gits hurt."
John Herbert spoke quietly. "Don't get excited, Nance. It's no use working yourself up like this, Jeff. I'm not going to fight you."
Nance loosed her grasp of Jeff's arm and stared wonderingly at Ann Haskel's son. The backwoodsman gazed at the last of the Haskels as if stupefied with astonishment. "You ain't a-goin' to fight?"
"Certainly not. Why should I?"
Diane Carrol, who had watched the scene with amused interest, suddenly laughed aloud.
Startled, the others looked toward the young woman, then as quickly faced about.
Ann Haskel was standing in the kitchen doorway.
For a long moment the mountain woman gazed at them without speaking, and under her scowling brows her black eyes were two points of dangerous light.
Then coming a slow step or two toward them, she said to Jeff, in the manner and tone of one addressing a trespassing dog, "Git out, you!"
The backwoodsman hesitated.
"Git!"
Jefferson Davis Todd retreated hurriedly to his room, snatching up his jug of liquor as he went.
"Hit's a Gawd's blessin' you come, Ann," cried Nance. "Jeff he war fixin' to—"
"Shet up!"
Nance drew fearfully back to the kitchen door.
The mountain woman, glaring at Diane, remarked coldly: "Thar's some wimmen what ain't never satisfied less'n they can git a couple of fool men to fightin' over 'em."
"But, mother—"
Ann Haskel shifted her gaze to her son. "An' ary man what won't fight for his woman jest natchally ain't no man. Damned if I know what he is—I don't reckon he's even a he."
"I think it is time for me to go," murmured Diane, drawing back from the window. With a faint smile she added, "Shall we meet at the twin oaks after lunch, John Herbert?"
He nodded. "I'll be waiting for you."
As Diane Carrol walked down the road from the Haskel place she told herself that she had been very foolish to send that second telegram. She should have returned to her own world as she had planned that rainy day when she first met Ann Haskel's son. Why, she asked herself, impatiently, had she so suddenly decided to prolong her stay in the backwoods? What had possessed her? If it was a desire to add to her collection of Ozark sketches which had prompted her, she was forced to admit, now, that she had accomplished very little.
That bit of the Wilderness Road between Pine Ridge store and the Lodge had delighted Diane's artist soul the first time she had driven over it. Her frequent walks from the Lodge to the store and back had increased her appreciative interest. The leisurely zigzag way down the hogback from the ridge, with glimpses of the river below, and over the green forest sea to the gray-blue hills in the distant sky, never failed to charm and inspire her. The log house and out-buildings of the Haskel place were as much a part of the woods as if they had been set in the little clearing by Nature's own hand. The winding tree-arched aisle through the timber, with ever-shifting patterns of sunlight and shadow; the varying tints and shadings of green with splashes of bright-colored flowers; the lure of each new turn in the road; the smell of the woods, and the forest sounds—never failed to thrill her.
But this morning, after that scene in the Haskel living-room, the artist was indifferent to her surroundings. More than that, she was conscious of her indifference and disturbed by it. She had a feeling of guilt as if at a religious service she had permitted her mind to become occupied with thoughts foreign to the time and place. She had come to this place to paint. She had not been drawn to the wilderness by any desire to share the pleasures of her vacationing friends. And she had worked. She knew that among the pictures which she had shipped when she thought she was going home there were some that would be considered better than anything she had ever before done. She had been as nearly satisfied with the results of her industry as it is possible for an artist ever to be. Now she found herself staying on from day to day for no apparent reason. She was painting with no conviction, no purpose. For the first time in her life she was merely pretending to paint. She was—yes, she was "dabbling."

Never before had Diane Carrol permitted herself to be disturbed by people. Her father had fitted into her life interests as the engines of a steamship fit into the vessel's activities. She had accepted Aunt Jessica as one accepts an established institution, and had gone about her own affairs with a tranquil mind. People who did not belong to her world were simply eliminated; they did not, for her, exist. Financially independent, she was free to order her life without considering people. Since the death of her father she had placed her art first.
Now she suddenly found herself thinking more about people than about art. And such people! Her interest in these backwoods folk was overshadowing her interest in the woodland scenes amid which they so crudely lived. Why could not she go on about her own affairs and forget them as she forgot the vacationists at the Lodge—as she had forgotten hundreds of others?
She told herself, of course, that it was the extraordinary situation in which the Haskels were placed. John Herbert—the cultured idealist, the sensitive poet, with his feelings for spiritual values and his beautiful dreams; Ann Haskel—illiterate, vulgar, lawless, ruling the neighborhood to her own ends with the spirit of a big-shot gangster ruling his mob. The last of the Haskels was as incapable of understanding his mother and her ugly materialistic backwoods life from which she had banished him, as the mother was incapable of appreciating her son and the life into which she had thrust him. What was going on within John Herbert's secret self? Coming home as he had, with the picture of his mother which Judge Shannon had put in his heart, what had been the effect of the shock of his disillusionment? What would be the final results? What did the mountain woman think of this son for whom she had sacrificed herself—for whom, doubtless, she had dreamed dreams? How could such a woman ever have borne such a son? Jeff Todd was the sort of offspring one had every right to expect of Ann Haskel. Why had she put her own child out of her life to raise up a creature like Jeff in his place? What parts were Nance Jordan and Judge Shannon playing in this amazing drama? What bond held these characters together? What was going to happen to Ann Haskel and her son? Why should she, Diane Carrol, care what happened to such people? But even as she took herself to task, she knew that she did care.
Back in the living-room of the Haskel house John Herbert stood at the window, watching Diane down the road. When she had passed from sight he turned and, without even a glance toward his mother, moved dejectedly toward the door of his room. His hand was on the latch when Ann spoke.
"Wait a minute."
The young man paused.
Ann looked at Nance Jordan significantly. "I ain't a-meanin' you."
Nance disappeared into the kitchen and the mountain woman turned again to her son. "Hit's time me an' you was a-havin' a little talk. You may's well set down."
John Herbert brought a chair for her and dropped into his own chair before the table in the book-corner.
When he did not speak, Ann said bitterly: "I sure never loved I'd live to see the day a Haskel would take sich as that off ary man in the world—least of all sich ornery, no-count, poor-white trash as Jeff Todd."
"Do you mean, mother, that you expect me to fight that drunken fool?"
Ann Haskel was as puzzled by her son's ignorance of backwoods ethics as he was bewildered by his mother's attitude.
Deliberately she said: "Hit's past me how you can even ask sich a question. You've jest natchally got to fight him. You've got to lick him, too."
"But why?"
Ann seemed to find difficulty in answering this. At last she explained, carefully: "I'm a-tellin' you, son, that if you let a measly skunk like Jeff Todd back you down, thar won't be no livin' in this neighborhood fer you, nor fer me, neither."

BRISTOL HIGH NINE WINS OVER BENSLEM

By Jack Orr
(H. S. Correspondent)
Coupled with "Man" Gibson's four-hit twirling and an eleven-bingle attack on "Al" Scott, Bensalem tossed, the Bristol High "Bunnies" won their second consecutive league fray as they took the Blue and White of Bensalem into camp by the count of 7-1.

Bristol jumped into the lead in the opening inning by gathering one tally. They gained three more runs in the second canto, another in the third, and two additional men dented the pentagon in the fourth. The "Bunnies" were held scoreless the last two frames.

Coach Reimer's boys were turned back by Gibson's slants until the sixth canto when they counted their lone tally on Robinson's walk and Jones' triple to deep left.

The home boys turned in their first double play of the season, yesterday, getting two twin killings. Each of them came at opportune moments.

Four of the Dougherty-coached boys came through with two hits, incidentally the first four men in the line-up. "Chick" Oppman, "Johnnie" Stallone, "Vic" Rockhill, and John Hibbs.
